MONDAY, DECEMBER 11, 1871.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

—Gold closed on Saturday at 94.10.

—In New York, cotton closed with an advance of a quarter of a cent on uplands—19½—with sales of 2633 bales.

—In Liverpool, cotton opened strong, and closed quiet and steady; uplands 94½; Orleans 104½; sales 12,000 bales.

—The income tax expires by limitation on the 30th inst.

—A dispatch from Washington states that Sumner declines the chairmanship of the committee on elections and privileges.

—The thermometer at Paris yesterday was sixteen degrees below zero, and the Seine was frozen over.

—The New York police prevented the public demonstration of the "International" vagabonds, which had been fixed for yesterday.

—The anticipated strike of telegraphers has commenced at Liverpool, and dispatches are delayed.

—Speaking of Jews, the Jewish Chronicle says Ireland is the only country in Europe where Jews were never persecuted.

—An American—of course it is an American—has started a ferry boat on the Sea of Galilee, and the steam-whistle and engine-gear are henceforth to do violence to its echoes.

—The Mormons are giving up all hopes of maintaining the practice of polygamy, but some believe that Congress will allow twenty-five years, more or less, for its gradual abolition.

—The announcement is made that two consignments of Chinese, designed for employment in cotton factories, are on their way to Salem, Massachusetts, and that more are to follow.

—Lawrence A. Gobright has been appointed commissioner from the District of Columbia to the centennial celebration in Philadelphia in 1876. The Star says this is a proper compliment to the esteemed Washington manager of the New York Associated Press.

—About a hundred cotton cases before the Court of Claims have been postponed, pending the decision of the Supreme Court whether the Presidential pardon entitles the pardoned party to testify in the Court of Claims against the government.

—Another distinguished conversion to the Church of Rome is announced. The new "veritas" of the Marquis of Bath—John Alexander Tynan—whose family dates its ancestry from the time of King John. His lordship has long been in the half-way house of Ritualism, and has now made the remainder of his journey. He is the patron of eleven livings in the Church of England.

—The day previous to the fight near New Orleans, Jim Macle is reported as having said: "I wish it distinctly understood that, win or lose, this will be my last fight in the prize ring. If any man attacks me, we will have it out then and there; but as to entering the ring again, that is entirely out of the question." Jim says he is getting too old to fight, and he is anxious now for a little peace. Let him have it.

—A Washington telegram says: "There has been no communication between Grant and Akerman regarding a change in the attorney-generalship, though the pressure for a change is great, and Akerman's resignation would be probably accepted. Influential political circles urge Akerman's lack of judicial force and attainments necessary to the position. The very highest authority thinks that Fish will stick."

—The Austrian Embassy in London, to which Count Beust has lately been appointed, is the principal diplomatic prize in the Emperor's gift, now Paris is no longer what it was. The Austrian Ambassadors in London maintain the same sort of exclusiveness as to society as she would do in her own circles at home, and it is much more difficult to obtain cards for her parties than for those of most of the other ministers.

—The Memphis Avalanche states that the negotiations for the control of the Memphis and Charleston Railroad, which have been pending for some weeks, have finally been concluded in favor of the Pennsylvania Railroad. Colonel Tom Scott, it is understood, has effected a lease for forty-five years on a guarantee of dividends, and it only remains now for the stockholders of the Memphis and Charleston to ratify the action of the directors.

—At a grand banquet, in St. Petersburg, on Thursday last, the Czar offered a toast to the health of the Emperor of Germany. He hoped the intimate friendship which existed between that monarch and himself would last as long as they lived, and be carried down to future generations by their successors; and he trusted that the fraternity of the armies of Germany and Russia, dating from an ever memorable epoch, would be perpetual. Thus would be constituted the best guarantees for the maintenance of peace and legal order in Europe.

—The Tichborne case had reached its fifty-first day in England at last accounts, and still witnesses come forward who identify the claimant as Roger Charles Tichborne and verify their recognition by a multitude of minute and ingenious tests. A correspondent writes that "a perfect revolution of opinion has occurred since the case was reopened, and every one now declares that the verdict must be for the plaintiff." The weak point in Tichborne's case has been that he had not proved that after his shipwreck in the Bella in 1853 he was picked up by the Osprey. The missing link was supplied on the 20th ult., by the testimony of M. A. Sharpings, who met him at that time in Melbourne harbor.

—The cable brings news that an English edifice which has witnessed the changes of a thousand years, Warwick Castle, the ancient and splendid seat of the Earl of Warwick, in Warwickshire, well known to travellers and historical students, has been irreparably damaged by fire, the origin of which is undiscovered. The great hall, the dining hall and other state apartments were completely burned out. The destruction of pictures, stonary and other works of art, and of articles of vertu, was great and most deplorable. Among the rare treasures of art which are supposed to have been destroyed is the famous Warwick vase—the massive marble ornament which once graced the villa of Adrian. It was in one of the green-houses. Some of Van-dyke's finest portraits, and pictures by Rembrandt of almost priceless worth, have also perished, together with splendid specimens of the armor and suits of mail of the middle ages. It is hoped that the solid strength of feudal and Elizabethan masonry resisted the power of the fire, so that this magnificent feudal stronghold—a link connecting the epoch of Alfred with the times in which we live—may be restored with all its courts and towers, even though the glories of its interior are gone forever. The castle was built on the west side of the Avon, on a solid rock, in which the cellars were excavated. The grand suite of apartments extended upwards of three hundred and thirty-three feet in a straight line.

A High Old Bill.

The Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives have reported favorably upon the bill "to declare the use of 'certain words a misdemeanor' and to recommend that it do pass. There is a prospect, then, the Legislature willing, that naughty expressions will soon cease to sully the lips of the lieges of South Carolina, and that not even the worst member of the Columbia Ring will be called a 'thief, rogue, scoundrel, or poltroon,' except in a strictly Pickwickian sense. The pleasure of calling a fancied foe by hard names is not deep enough to compensate for 'imprisonment, with hard labor, in the county jail,' at the discretion of the Court. We fear, however, that inveterate vituperators will find a way to evade the law. They will whip the foul fiend around the stump by inventing a new vocabulary of abuse. Suppose, for instance, that, instead of making use of 'the opprobrious epithets' forbidden by the law, they call their tergiversating neighbor a Scout, and fling at the head of a nouveau riche the stunning title of Parker. Would the use of these names, 'in a rude, angry or revengeful manner,' expose the unfortunate offender to trial in a Court of 'competent jurisdiction?' Or if a heedless Conservative shouted out that Mr. So-and-So was a Mackey, or a Hendricks, or a Bowen, would the guilty wretch be likely to scourn for an unpleasantly long period under the roof of the county jail? We are anxiously waiting for the coming of that millennial time when all words shall be sweet as honey, and no man shall merit a harsher title than that of angel or saint. But so long as the citizens of South Carolina are only to be made reverential by an Act of Assembly, it is just as well for the Judiciary Committee to make their legal nets close enough in texture to hold the little fish as well as the big ones. And if they can, by law, prevent profanity and obscenity, we would suggest that they cut a little deeper, and, by law, prevent any member of their own body from telling flimsy, pocketing the public moneys or showing the white feather.

After all, the sting of the Act "to declare the use of certain words a misdemeanor" lies in the tail. The second section provides that any person who may be indicted for assault and battery may plead, in justification, that the language which the bill prohibits has been used towards him, with this qualification: "Provided the assault and battery shall be proved not to have been excessive." We humbly hint that this is rather vague. What is to be deemed an "excessive" assault and battery? Mr. Jones calls Mr. Brown "a liar, thief, scoundrel and poltroon," in a rude, angry or revengeful manner, and Mr. Brown, in the language of the Ring, taps Jones's cheek and closes his peepers. Would that be an "excessive" assault and battery? Are we to frame a sliding scale in this fashion: A thief, one black eye. A thief and liar, two black eyes. A thief, liar and poltroon, two black eyes and the forfeiture of the front teeth. And is the force of muscle to be taken into consideration? What is to justify a blow with an umbrella or a slap in the face? Is the aggrieved person to do his level best, and leave it to the "Court of competent jurisdiction" to determine whether the punishment was excessive? These are obvious difficulties, which we considerably suggest for the contemplation of the individuals who, if the bill should pass, are most likely to find it necessary to avail themselves of its liberal provisions.

It is evident that the Bowen Reformers have come to terms with Governor Scott, who will be white-washed at an early day. We expected nothing from them, and are not disappointed. The work of Reform can only be accomplished by men of honor and integrity.

The City of Columbia is invited to go into the loan market as a borrower at eight per cent. In allowing the Municipal Ring to issue as many bonds as may be necessary to bring the debt up to $800,000, the bill will receive the people of the acts to reduce the Bills Receivable, to relieve the treasury, and to pay the interest on the debt. But this circumvention was unnecessary. The debt of Columbia could have been run up to $800,000 without the help of a borrowing bill.

It seems that the Air Line Railroad is in hot water. Whipper's action in the matter is based, we presume, upon the remonstrances of the good folk of Anderson, who are indignant that the company, in violation of their charter, should leave so thriving a town out in the cold.

The Rumored Removal of Treasurer Gurney.

[From the Missionary Record.] Rumor has it that McLaughlin is to be appointed Treasurer of this county, vice W. H. Gurney. We should not be surprised. These infernal thieves have no consciences. They are all muzz, worse than horse leeches. Governor Scott only needs to do this thing, and he will have reached the climax of outrages on an inoffensive people. There is a degree of decency about General Gurney which gives him a place in honest men's regard. It may be that this is the head and front of his offence. We warn his Excellency that we are near the sacred spot where patience ceases to be a virtue. It requires but this act, and the Sirocco will come. There will not be a dollar paid into the treasury of this county if that appointment is made.
